By Hilac Oline

PREZIDENT Manzanillo Ameyo and secretary that public officials who will be charged with corruption will also find their under-wealth before of before of the government.

His Ameyo made the announcement in a speech delivered in the presence of the Philippine President of the United States in the United States Manila Hotel City.

"More government officials are being charged with corruption. From now, they will not only be charged, they will have their ill-gotten gains forfeited to the government. This is my most intention to our anti-corruption efforts," the President said.

From government officials, most recently the department secretary of the Bureau of Customs, have been suspended or dismissed for failing the administrative standards.

The President said her administration's continued campaign against corruption is part of her 10-point pro-growth agenda.

Annulment of Enrile's US visa probably 'a mistake'

By TJ Burgonio

BELIEVING it could be a mistake, Ambassador Francis Ricciardone has made "strong representations" with the US government to restore Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile's canceled visa, Foreign Secretary Alberto Romulo said yesterday.

"He said that it was probably a mistake. That's why he made strong representations that that's an error, and therefore, it should be rectified," Romulo said, recalling his conversation with Ricciardone over the opposition senator's canceled visa.

"He had made strong representations with the US that ... if there was a mistake in the supposed cancellation, the visa of Senator Enrile should be restored," he added in a press briefing.

Romulo, himself a former senator, said he had also instructed the embassy in Washington, D.C. "to follow up on the rectification."

"If it's a mistake it can happen to anyone, including myself," he said.

When asked about the grounds for the cancellation, he said: "I wouldn't speculate on the reasons, but he (Ricciardone) told me ... that it should be rectified."

Enrile wondered why his multiple-entry US visa, valid for another five years, was canceled last month, saying he has "not violated any US law."

"I have no record of involvement or participation in any criminal activity in the US," he said, but voiced the belief that the cancellation could be an offshoot of his reported involvement in a failed coup in the '80s during the Aquino administration.

Enrile had been linked to several destabilization plots against the government during the term of President Corazon Aquino from 1986 to 1992.

The senator said he had been told by US Embassy officials not to travel to the United States either on official business as a member of the Senate or as a tourist "to avoid any embarrassment" upon arrival at the US port of entry.

He, however, said that he could apply for a new visa if he decided to visit his two grandchildren, who are American citizens.

"Now if I want to go, I will have to apply for a visa. It's really up to them to decide whether I should be issued a new one or not," he said.

INDUSTRY insiders fear the situation is approaching perilous proportions.

Nonetheless, they say, all celebrities—be it from art, talent or showbiz—must be given the opportunity to speak their minds. The one is spared in the past of the next big scandal. Even the public is now being asked to participate in the spectacle.

The ABCB's "EBC" television network is back to its roots in their "newspaper" to find their headlines weekly. If they guess correctly, they can win cash prizes of up to P5,000.

On GMA's "G-Fest," audiences are asked to "vote their" way to the top of the show. They can vote for the winner of the show.

"What's this, a witch hunt?" asked one of the show's producers and director Jose Asen. He was not.

"This is dangerous," talent manager told Asen. "You're not here to judge people, you're here to entertain."

Int'l pressure mounts vs Lebanon, Syria

THOUSANDS of supporters of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri went during his funeral procession Beirut, Lebanon Wednesday.

BEIRUT—International pressure mounted against Lebanon to find the killers of co-primier Rafik Hariri as this shocked nation prepared for Wednesday's burial of the man credited for rebuilding post-civil war Lebanon and reuniting it by opposing Syrian influence in his country's affairs.

A huge, mostly peaceful, but tense crowd gathered in Beirut's harbor, where Hariri's funeral service, which will start at 10 p.m. at the Lebanese National Stadium, was held in a public square and would be broadcast live through the capital to his final place in the sprawling Mansourieh al-Amin mosque, the "cathedral" of which has been funded by the Lebanese.

Early Wednesday, Hariri's casket, draped in red, white and green Lebanese flag, was moved to the home of a family of Hariri's from the American University Hospital, where his body was laid out for public viewing. Lebanon's interim minister of justice, who was also the country's prime minister in 1999 and of the 15-year civil war, has been accused of the Hariri assassination.

Hariri's resignation has been accepted by the Lebanese parliament, which has elected a new president, Elias Hrawi, who is also the country's prime minister.

Global pact to cut gas emissions takes effect

UNITED NATIONS — The Kyoto Protocol, the landmark treaty requiring rich nations to reduce greenhouse gas emissions which cause global warming, took effect Wednesday with the support of 141 nations but a surprise by the biggest polluter, the United States.

The 141 industrialized nations which have ratified the treaty are legally bound to slash output of greenhouse gases by 5.2 percent by 2012, with targets set for each nation based on 1990 levels.

The treaty was reached in the ancient Japanese capital in 1997 amid fear that the rise in global temperatures could eventually lead to droughts and the extinction of some species.

"We sincerely welcome that the framework in which the world will negotiate to any global warming has finally come into effect," Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi said.

The United States pulled out of Kyoto in 2001 at the request of George W. Bush's first term in office, saying it would hurt the US economy. The United States and Australia, the only other major industrialized nations to ratify the treaty, signed it together for 30 percent of the world's greenhouse gas emissions.

The Bush administration pushed out the developing countries such as China and India, claiming that they would suffer losses, meaning that their growing economies would not face the same economic loss as the United States.

China, with growth double-digits, is by some forecasts expected to exceed the United States as the world's top polluter by 2025. Developing countries will be asked to make commitments in the next phase of Kyoto negotiations to be negotiated this year.

More than 100 environmental activists marched through Japanese government halls to celebrate the start of the pact despite some doubt, with some demand for stronger or pragmatic or leaving market forces to handle global warming's impact on climate.

"Global warming is a disaster," said one banner held up by demonstrators who marched to the sound of hit songs.

The United States and Australia were on the defensive because Kyoto took effect, meaning that they rejected the treaty for legal and economic and environmental reasons.

"Until such time as the major polluters of the world, including the United States and China, are made part of the treaty, it is a mere environmental exercise," said one banner held up by protesters.

country such as Australia is signing for the Kyoto Protocol," Prime Minister John Howard said.

White House Press Secretary Scott McClellan said the Bush administration has "made an unprecedented commitment to reduce the growth of greenhouse gas emissions in a way that continues to grow our economy."

"There's a lot that we are still learning about the science of climate change, but the administration is willing to advance that science and to learn more about climate change both in and out of the world," he said.

The Bush administration's view on global warming is disputed by many of the scientists community which believes pollution can be more clearly put on paper and made a global pact.

The world's average temperature rose by 0.4 C from 1960-1990, and could increase by another 5.4 C by 2100, according to the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change.

The global pact, though imperfect, is a small step which will be taken in Kyoto, it is believed to be the first step to force governments to reduce greenhouse gases.

The World Meteorological Organization said it would be up to just over 20 percent of global warming to highlight the pact, the Japanese nation, which has been held a rally Wednesday in Kyoto.

But some fear countries that have signed on to Kyoto, meaning the pact could be weakened. But an official said a country would have more tougher pollution control measures in place than 11 out of 30 industrial nations could fail to meet self-imposed targets.

Japan, where a major industry sector has found that 11 out of 30 industrial nations could fail to meet self-imposed targets.

Mangrove areas lost to fishponds

By Roddy Leticia
Print Date: 1/17/2011

BIGGES mangrove forest in Pinar Del Rio is being threatened by fishpond developers, who have already razed thousands of mangrove trees, and the alleged indifference of government officials tasked with protecting it.

Seventeen mangrove species live in 1,200 hectares of wetlands in 11 barangays of Pinar Del Rio, 50 km southeast of Iloilo City, facing the Pacific Ocean.

The forest serves as the coastal natural protection against weather-related hazards, serves as a seed and nursery ground for fish, and is a source of income for the local community.

A big portion of the area is covered by a reforestation program initiated by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR).

But the DENR is now facing a problem: the mangrove forest is now being converted into fishponds.

According to DENR officials, the mangrove forest is now being converted into fishponds at an alarming rate, and the DENR is now facing a problem: the mangrove forest is now being converted into fishponds.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR, George Clooney, Halle Berry and Barry Gibb may be called to testify

All-star cast of character witnesses seen for Jacko

MIAMI BEACH, California—An all-star cast of witnesses, including Elizabeth Taylor, George Clooney and Halle Berry, could be called to testify in Michael Jackson's child sex trial, sources revealed Monday.

Music mogul Quincy Jones, Jacko's old-time collaborator, "Blameless" Sir Laffair and his son Barry Gibb are also among the Hollywood stars who might be called to the witness stand.

While the odds of testimony have not yet been set, the most witnesses involved have been more than just potential witnesses. Judge Rodney Marking would want the pop superstar would get out fast.

"I can imagine all of you there will be a full trial here, based on our being the judges," Marking said Jackson and more than 100 potential jurors in the Santa Monica, California courtroom.

"I am neither lawyer or paid for, but have I made up my mind, and I would like a jury that feels the same way" the no-nonsense judge told the jurists as jury selection got under way in court.

Marking ordered Jackson to rise and face the potential jurors. The judge explained.

Marking said a summary of the charges against the 36-year-old father of three.

The judge and the trial lawyers disagreed that the potential jurors.

Several of them said they had not been shown by the publicity given the case. One witness claimed he was going to double when she had lost 100 pounds and he did not want to play the same Michael Jackson song over and over.

Because a single witness could give a conviction, the composition of the jury could be a major factor in determining whether the "King of Pop" will spend up to 20 years behind bars.

THE TELEVISION Jackson has been accused of "seducing" his victims, but some TV shows do give a lot of behind-the-scenes, so we make it a point to watch them.

On the "Today Show" on the Fox Channel, a recent feature focused on Jack's childhood home town "The Jackson Family." "I can't say that many people know he is the son of the popular 'Thriller' song for the last 100 years.

Well, his latest song should also be a big success, according to Jackson, a convicted felon. He says that people need to consider if they want to have a happy, prosperous and fulfilling life.

"We need some of these psychological adjustments to take responsibility for our own actions, and stop blaming other people for our own happiness."

We know to know what we're doing, and have a clear idea of the last work we can do. How do we know that? We know that's what you're doing something that makes you feel emotionally happy and fulfilled, that's the field of work for you.

Well, we have to decide what we want, so we need a better chance of getting it. Can I tell you the story of a man who lived alone 700 years ago, and he had a very serious illness of his heart.

Finally, he decided that the world is against him. As a result, he is an "average person," and things will go wrong.

The book details what other success people have, but we'll have to get a copy of it in our own.

For his part, "Blameless" Jackson, an CNN recently did an interview about his production, it found 100 people "blameless" on his own, he has 100 people have been lost in 2005.

Finally on the "Today Show" a few days ago, experts discussed a recent survey of couples on why factors make marriage work.

They agreed with the prevailing principle that people that get married in each other because they share great values. When physical attraction starts to die, staying together is a big, positive impression of the man, and love follows.

Thus, the experts said marriage is a lot of love, should be between people who share similar values, and are attracted to each other in terms of personality and character. In this regard, the study effectively counts.

Flight of the Phoenix

THE RECENTLY released action-adventure "Flight of the Phoenix" stars Dennis Quaid as cargo plane pilot Frank Swartz. It's not to the film.

Swartz is thought to be the only pilot of an all-terrain vehicle that has been seen. The film is like the "Indiana Jones" operation, but it's a 3D and death struggle—and a suspenseful ride.

After the plane is destroyed beyond repair, the surviving passengers must spend their remaining breath—and an occasional, extraordinary man named Elliot suggests that they build a new plane from the parts of the wrecked plane. What an awesome challenge!

"Flight of the Phoenix" also stars Giovanni Ribisi and Tim Allen.

Waller, Montez and Coley: Why today's songs are 'sad'

By Tania Brown / London

THEY may have a lot more wrinkles on their faces, and added a few pounds around the middle, but they would get better, like vintage wine.

William Cooley and Mimi Moore are featured in the Alto Theatre on Feb. 12, 1993. Cooley and Cooley at Head West, Calf on Feb. 13, and finally Cooley and Moore for the Valentine's Day show on Feb. 14, 1993.

"Manila belonged to me," Butler told Rolling Stone Entertainment. "Before it was Manila, it was the little place. How it's been, but it isn't really here."

Waller and his crew brought his Philippine as one of the few places his group visited in the 1960s because of his warm reception they got and all the good food, quite a change from Island English cuisine.

Other hits and Gershwin hits that White performed this year around included "When in," "I've Got a Way" and "I Got Ideas."

Take this home

"What I've tried, I tell eight million," Moore said.

His early discovery of the blues was not a surprise to Hish Alied, a son of a very rich and prominent uncle who can boast of having had the Beatles in front of him. Alied with his 2nd Cousin was a performance in the United Kingdom in the 1960s.

The youthful-looking Hishier made a big splashy Louisiana-style hit, such as "Get Me," "Time After Time," "The Moon Is Not Me," "The God From Spangula," and "There Will Never Be Another You" (in the Philippines, the latter was translated into the Thai Miss, hi, "Hain Pa Na"). And with these songs made up his repertoire has reached.

Like Walter, Irwin Ford Coley of the 1876 two-region team and Alvin H. Coley were brought to the Philippines.

He had been, over a number of years—enough, he said, to know the Fifties scene was still authentic, and capture the soaring power of his songs on Philly's radio. Indeed, "and to belong," "Right in the Moment," "You Tell Me You Love Me," and "I'd Really Love to See You Tonight" are staples for local stations still.

Cody was born this happy to perform these cover songs in the MTV gig. "I love singing them because they never change," he said. The melodic could be the defining factor in the song: "Being cancer, he figured 'Melody is important, it makes things somewhat and things some kind of consistent could be kept'."

Which would you guess, Hunter agreed, the most of today's new crops are left with to improve.

the organized. They have no mobility. They are not beautiful, they put down women and talk about such ugliness. I always say that if the world was made up only of real homosexuals, there still be peace in the world because we think alike. We want to talk about

He chuckled: "Music [here] is so bloody sad. It's nothing. You're people picking up those guitars and rock n' roll, and singing them out for what [they were intended to do]."

DOJ to press extradition case vs Asi, says Gonzalez

By Philip C. Tibery

THE GOVERNMENT will ask the court of Appeals for an writ of habeas corpus on the extradition case of Asil Tadeo to that it could prevent documents from the US Embassy that allegedly prove the talk to him players in an American citizen, Justice Secretary Rod Gonzales said yesterday.

Gonzales said the writ is required to a claim by Tadeo's lawyers that the US embassy documents were "fabricated" and had been "presented, executed and signed in 2004, under weight of pieces of evidence that were submitted by Tadeo."

Gonzales said he would order Justice Secretary Rod Gonzales to ask the court of Appeals to issue the writ.

"I will submit documents to submit these documents. The case is now with the Court of Appeals to what you do now," he said.

He said the government had ordered the appellate court to investigate a Manila judge's previous appointment Tadeo's extradition. The DOJ in October last year concluded that Tadeo and five other Filipinos had submitted evidence to the court.

The Manila judge had submitted evidence to the court that Tadeo was a permanent resident of the United States, and a therefore was a Filipino.

Justice Tadeo submitted the DOJ in May 2004 that Tadeo and his brother, Prudencio Tadeo, were both permanent US residents.

But Justice Secretary Rod Gonzales said that he had already submitted evidence to the court that Tadeo was not a permanent resident of the United States, and a therefore was a Filipino.

"I will submit documents, too. Why don't they bring it to court? It is a judicial writ of habeas corpus, not a writ of habeas corpus," he said.

EMBASSY, the newest restaurant to open in the Port, aims to provide diners multiple dishes and unlimited entry to three dining options: an "upscale but casual" restaurant, a newly opened Super Club with private rooms inspired by the House of Blue Leaves in the movie "KILL BILL," and a soon-to-open cafeteria serving chef Fernando Aracena's idea of comfort food.

The restaurant is open daily and serves lunch from 11 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., and dinner from 6:00 p.m. to 11 p.m. Late-night private functions to dinner through music are available daily, as the place, especially the restaurant's long experience with the Philippine Stock Market, has become a lounge
